KinetIQ champions youth wellness with community sports launch and educational app

KinetIQ Sports Nutrition Inc., a Canadian venture dedicated to safe, science-backed recovery for young athletes, is thrilled to announce the launch of its products in grassroots sports leagues across Ontario. Beginning in January, KinetIQ will be on the ground at house-league soccer, basketball and other youth tournaments to introduce its clean-label hydration mixes, jelly sticks and recharge pouches designed specifically for athletes aged 10-25. The community launch is part of KinetIQ for All, an initiative that allocates a portion of every sale to underfunded teams and ensures that kids of all backgrounds can access proper recovery nutrition. By donating products, sponsoring after-school programs and volunteering at local sports events, KinetIQ aims to make recovery education and safe nutrition accessible to everyone.

"Our mission is simple - to empower young athletes to recover smarter by delivering clean, science-backed nutrition in fun, accessible formats," said Mack Stewart, co-founder and CEO of KinetIQ. "Launching in community leagues allows us to meet families where they play and to give back to the grassroots programs that build confidence, community and wellbeing."

KinetIQ is also debuting its direct-to-consumer e-commerce site and KinetIQ Playbook™. The online store makes it easy for parents and coaches to order youth-safe recovery products, subscription boxes and seasonal bundles, delivered right to their doors. The KinetIQ Playbook™ is a gamified wellness platform unlocked via QR codes on every product. It turns recovery lessons into interactive challenges — hydration check-ins, guided stretching and mini-quizzes — and rewards users with points, badges and exclusive discounts.

At upcoming house-league events, families can visit the KinetIQ booth to sample youth-safe recovery products, unlock the gamified Playbook and get tips from recovery experts. Donations and a portion of sales at these events support KinetIQ for All, with resources going directly to underfunded teams and after-school programs.

KinetIQ Sports Nutrition Inc. is a Vaughan-based company founded in 2025 to solve an overlooked problem in youth sports: access to safe, enjoyable and scientifically balanced recovery products. The company offers clean-label hydration mixes, jelly sticks and recharge pouches engineered for athletes aged 10-25, supported by the values of safety, transparency, education and performance. Through its KinetIQ for All initiative, the company donates products and resources to underfunded programs and volunteers in local communities. With its innovative KinetIQ Playbook™ platform, KinetIQ combines nutrition, education, habit formation and gamification into a holistic recovery ecosystem.
